Linking pathogenic pathways shared by skin inflammatory diseases to new immunoregulatory drugs

The continuous growth in the understanding of the molecular mechanisms of skin immunology, inflammatory cutaneous diseases and skin manifestations of extracutaneous disease deserves special attention.

Inflammatory skin diseases are receiving new interpretations based on the advancements on the molecular bases of inflammatory and immune responses. Pathways and mediators shared by different diseases are being elucidated. Many new treatment options are becoming available, increasing the need of forums where basic, translational and clinical research are presented together.

Sessions:

1. Workshops
2. Lectures
3. Free communication sessions
4. Posters

Topics:

1. Skin immune responses
2. Neutrophilic dermatoses
3. Eosinophilic dermatoses
4. Panniculitis
5. Vasculitis syndromes
6. Granulomatous diseases
7. Oral lichen planus
8. Vitiligo
9. Alopecia areata
10. Hidradenitis suppurativa
11. Psoriasis
12. Psoriatic arthritis
13. Pustular psoriasis
14. Pemphigus
15. Pemphigoids
16. Urticaria
17. Atopic dermatitis
18. Chronic itch
19. Cutaneous drug reactions
20. Cutaneous toxicity in oncologic patients
